Death Ends Bizarre Life of Stephan Ward

LONDON, Aug. 3 (U-P)—Stephan Ward's bizarre life ended today and the playboy who started the Profumo scandal left a suicide note saying: "I'm sorry to disappoint the yulcures."

Ward died in a flower-bedecked room of St. Stephen's hospital, where he was brought unconscious Wednesday morning after suffering from a massive overdose of drugs.

The 50-year-old osteopath, artist and self-described "romantic" was found dead in his room after a year of love making, awailed with some time during the previous night. His note said he had given up hope of settling on free charges at the Old Bailey court.

Yesterday the trial went into its final hours without him, and the jury convicted him as he had feared.

He never regained consciousness to hear of the verdict, which could have brought him two prison terms of seven years each. Officially marked the sensational life closed with this notation: "He died—Aug. 3, Justice—Archibald."

Marshall never got a chance to see Ward.

Ward was convicted of living off the earnings of the two most notorious call girls of the Profumo case: Christine Keeler, 21, and Marilyn Mandy Rice-Davies, 28.

He introduced the red-haired Miss Keeler to John D. Profumo, and Profumo had to resign as war minister in disgrace when the scandal came out.

Secluded at the home of a girl friend, Miss Keeler burst into tears when she heard of the death of the man she said held a strange influence over her life. She refused to talk to anyone.

"It was Ward who pressed for a full examination of the Profumo case," Keeler said. "He said that the go-as would ruin his reputation. To the last, he professed to believe he was the victim of political revenge for opening up Pandora's box that shook the conservative government of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan."

He went through the final days of his life snubbed by his noble friends, and he died a bitter man. In the final hours, he penned several notes and left them in the Chelsea apartment where he was staying with Noel Howard Jones, a young advertising man who testified in his defense.

A note to Jones was released by Jack Wheatley, Ward's lawyer, disrupted in three pages of end-cry handwriting that became progressively illegible. It began: "I'm sorry I had to do this here. It's really more than I can stand—the horror day after day at the court and in the streets—it's not only fear—it's a wish not to let them see me. I'd rather set myself."

Blackout

SHOSHONE, Aug. 3 (U-P)—Bill J. Nelson, Great Falls' famed at the wheel of his car and crashed into the Brown team company building, South Main street, about 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

Nelson, driving a 1958 Oldsmobile, told Bill Anderson, city police chief, that he blacked out and didn't know what happened—until he awakened and his car was inside the building.

The building damage was estimated between $300 and $400. The auto was a total loss; Nelson was uninjured.

Viet Nam Religious Dispute Threatens U.S. Commitment

SAIGON, Viet Nam, Aug. 3 (U-P)—A bitter debate about religious persecution—real or imagined—in South Viet Nam has reached a point, seriously threatening the United States' $50 million dollar commitment to this communist threatened nation.

The dispute between Buddhist leaders and the government of President Ngo Dinh Diem, a Roman Catholic, seems to have had only limited military effects on the war against Communist Viet Cong guerrillas.

But international effects may be more serious.

Most nations in the non-communist world, including the United States, have little sympathy for governments exercising religious persecution.

And South Viet Nam is heavily depending on outside help to survive the communist push.

For three months, Buddhist leaders have fanned the flames of civil disobedience in protest marches, speeches, pamphleteering and the spectacle of an aged monk burning himself alive in Saigon street.

The government, tightly controlled by President Diem and his relatives, has hit back hard—with billy clubs, tear gas and bullets in some cases.

Twelve persons, Buddhists and bystanders, have been killed. Several hundred demonstrators have been injured more or less seriously. Hundreds of other Viet Nam have been questioned by police.

Water Carnival Theme Is Chosen

BUILT, Aug. 3 (U-P)—West Side story will serve as the theme for the annual water carnival at 4 p.m. Friday at the Dahl swimming pool.

The annual event, which is held at the conclusion of the Red Cross swim instruction program at the city swimming pool, will include ballet numbers, clown, precision swimming, fancy diving relatives, has hit back hard—with billy clubs, tear gas and bullets in some cases.

All youngsters who have successfully completed their lessons will be presented with Red Cross swim certificates during the carnival. The public is invited to the free show.

Middle Ground

America needs its middle ground. This is where the conflicts are resolved, its debates turned into action. This is where the factions meld together to become consensus, and the country moves on.

Where such ground does not exist, an effective-free agency, a functional government, for those who would make consensus by reasonable accommodation of differing views.

When that is impossible, decision can only be made by the procedure of conquest and surrender, that is, by a dominant (and necessary majority) group imposing its will on all who disagree with it.

This can, of course, be accomplished by the actual use of force, or the threat of it. It can also be achieved simply by holding within the dominant group all the elements of power a modern society must muster.

A society that is governed thus is, for all practical purposes, totalitarian. It listens to no dissent, entertains no compromise. All matters are decided by the dominant majority group speaks. The extremists are at the helm.

Fortunately for us all, the United States is not in this condition. It still has an immense middle ground. Debate flourishes richly in most areas. The rivalry of ideas is encouraged from time to time.

Extremists always are bent on destroying not only their opposites, but numbers at the other pole, but on capturing, in limiting or otherwise neutralizing all who stand between on the expansive middle ground.

Probably they always succeed in affecting some this way, and sometimes the extremists are quite broad, until men scanning the field will report "there is no middle ground."

Generally it is in fact still there. We have the look, though, of occupied territory.

That is a dangerous look in any free society. It can lead to weapons being taken up in civil war. Short of that, it can produce a national condition which some call "mental civil war."

Conflict among some of our hard political struggles today. It is not a good omen.

This is a moment in our history when we are being continuously pulled against a distribution of that "true ground" where we must forge a workable free society.

HOME FRONT

A private public opinion poll of 14 people of assorted ages, occupations, philosophies, wealth, and interests was conducted the other day by an intrepid researcher.

The results were at least interesting, and perhaps comically significant. This poll was different from other polls in that no questions were asked, instead, the pollster just snooped and listened to what the subjects said.

This was on a day when the Chinese Reds and the Russian Reds were puffing at the other pole, but on capturing, in limiting or otherwise neutralizing all who stand between on the expansive middle ground.

And when those 14 people talking about the fact that a baby-bongo had arrived at a zoo!

Maybe we're going to survive after all.

SAVE-THE-LEOPARD PLEA

Fashion trends usually appear to be more feminine whimsy. Sometimes they have serious undertones.

An urgent plea comes from the National Audubon society to American women to quit buying coats made of leopard skins.

The recent fashion trend has created an extraordinary demand for the big African cat's fur, and his very existence hangs in the balance.

Although the animal is protected by law in most African nations, poaching is going on at a high rate. Wildlife authorities in Nairobi and Johannesburg have confirmed the danger.

Leopards are being shot, speared and trapped at rates estimated at 80 per cent faster than their capacity to reproduce.

The conservationists hope this fur fashion passed.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

By Andrew Tully

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—In a building on 10th street, a couple of doors from the Soviet Consulate, the interior department is overseeing a series of periodic meetings with the press. The subject is the world's most pressing problem—the shortage of water.

On the 10th floor, a man in a white lab coat, set up by Harry S. Truman in 1942 to turn the interior department into a source of fresh water. Until President Kennedy called attention to it, it was a forgotten agency. It was created with an average annual appropriation of less than $1 million. The first year, 1943, it received $1.5 million. By 1962, it had grown to $15 million. In 1963, it is expected to reach $20 million. It has 10 million dollars in fiscal 1963, and 10 million dollars in fiscal 1964.

FOURTH PLANT ON LINE—Now Kennedy is beginning to pay off. On July 1, a new desalting demonstration plant was dedicated at Roswell, N.M. The plant is designed to distill fresh water from brackish water. The new plant is capable of purifying a million gallons of water a day.

This is the fourth such plant to open for business in the last two years. The first was dedicated in 1951, and which produces fresh water through successive distillations. The second plant was opened in Webster, S.D., in March, 1962, with a capacity of 250,000 gallons a day. The third plant, which was dedicated in San Diego, Calif., with a capacity of a million gallons a day.

MANY METHODS UNDER TEST—Since the program is still in its experimental stage, the South Dakota and San Diego plants also are used to test different methods of desalting. The first method is the use of a distillation. This latter process involves introducing heated water into a distillation column, which causes the water to boil, and then the steam is condensed into fresh water.

Another method is the use of a reverse osmosis process. This involves forcing water through a semi-permeable membrane, which removes salt from the water. A third method is the use of a solar desalting process. This involves using solar energy to heat water, which is then distilled.

COSTS STILL HIGH—The West Key plant is being tested by Interior Undersecretary James K. Carr as capable of producing fresh water from 60 to 75 cents a thousand gallons. This is much higher than the cost of water which now runs as low as six cents a thousand gallons, but the record shows it is amazing progress.

In cutting the cost of desalting water from 50 cents a thousand gallons to 10 cents, the program is expected to produce a period when the cost of practically everything else has been going up.

When compared to other federal programs of far less importance, this project is a bargain for the taxpayers, who have been left in the lurch. It is a dirt cheap alongside the 30 billion dollar project to build a new highway system.

RICKS COLLEGE FLOWERS

Look what city is consistently No. 3 in the value of building permits each month.

Rebuck takes the honor.

The impressive Ricks college expansion program, the LDS church's largest in the area, is expected to approach 1,500 this fall. And there's more to come.

WHEN A PITCHER GOES HOME

Dick Radatz has become known to baseball fans of Boston, and perhaps a few other places, as a pitcher who has a few thoughts about the mind of the pitcher. But he has some thoughts that go beyond baseball, especially in the off-season.

MISS GUNDS OF CONSERVATION

"If Goldwater or someone can't put a stop to it," says Holmes Alexander, dedicated rightwing environmentalist, "this land of liberty is a general waste."

He has this conclusion "soil saving, dam building, soil reclamation, soil irrigation, area redevelopment, man-made waterways, and so on."

At present 2,500 feet of the runway is oiled, and the program calls for oiling another 1,000 feet either this fall or early next year. Balance of the runway is "compacted" and "rolled" and shale.

The airport is owned jointly by Lemhi county and Salmon city. Improvement work is being carried on in cooperation with the U.S. forest service.

The Salmon airport is a base for the operation of tanker planes which carry retardant chemicals in the fighting of forest fires.

Extension of Bonneville Power Sparks Public Debate

BOISE, Aug. 3 (U)—The extension of the Bonneville power administration marketing area into southern Idaho has generated a sometimes bitter public debate that can be expected to continue for years.

One reason for the barrage of statements and speeches on both sides is that the decision on whether the Bonneville move will be fully put into effect hasn't been made.

That will come when congress votes on an appropriation for a transmission line to link Bonneville's Columbia river power system to southern Idaho.

Without that link, Bonneville can't provide the large quantity of power required to serve the southeast Idaho phosphate industry. Its move into the area is based in large part on the

About Time

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 3 (U)—With their 610 children looking on, 210 couples were married this week in a mass ceremony in an auditorium usually used for boxing matches and circuses.

The government arranged the ceremony in its campaign against couples living together out of wedlock.

She seldom ventures onstage, preferring that the job be handled by the junior actor from Arizona and leader of the Republican conservative wing, Barry Goldwater.

Peggy, her nickname since early youth, more often can be found at a beach-side cabin in southern California.

Her voice is soft, almost a purr, she speaks a blend of the Latin for young ladies plus the colloquialisms of the West.

Her eyes are like a summer sky in Arizona, warm, light-blue and deep desert brown, a color that matches her hair, she is 5 feet 3 and just a pound on the plump side.

Mrs. Goldwater Waits Silently in Eye of Politics

Barry refused to let any eyes grow under his feet. He pursued the young Mrs. Goldwater from coast to coast and finally on New Year's eve of 1953 squirmed into a telephone booth, where Peggy was attempting to call her mother, and proposed.

She accepted before the last ritual fell into the pay-phone slot.

On Sept. 22, 1954, Peggy Johnson for water and settled into the uncluttered life of a business executive's wife.

She attended Kimburt Girls school in Coonerville, Ind. Mount Vernon seminary—Washington, D. C. and the Grand Central art school, New York City, where for three years she studied and painted.

For years her family spent winter vacations at Phoenix resorts and the summers in Michigan.

And in Arizona she met a young department-store salesman destined to become the nation's most prominent conservative.

Barry Johnson was born in Munich, Ind. and if the spoon in her mouth wasn't solid silver, it was heavily-plated. Her father, Ray Prescott Johnson, was for many years president of the Warner Gear company and one of the founders of the multimillion-dollar Borg-Warner corporation.

Denver Overhauls Houston by 27-10

DENVER, Aug. 3 (AP)—Rookie quarterback Mickey Slaughter threw two touchdown passes and a veteran quarterback George Shaw plucked another in guiding Denver to a 27-10 victory over Houston tonight in an American Football League exhibition.

Two last quarter field goals by Gene Mingo from 41 and 41 yards out accounted for the rest of the Denver scoring.

Houston took a 10-0 lead in the first quarter on quarterback George Blanda's 40-yard field goal and his 50-yard touchdown pass to end Willard Dewart. Houston was stilled the rest of the way by Denver's sturdy defense.

Slaughter, from Louisiana Tech, maneuvered Denver's first touchdown with a 24 yard pass to Bob Scarrito and a 50-yard scoring throw to end Lionel Taylor.

PROBING TONGUE of mobile flame thrower bites into underbrush as forest crew pokes torch to diseased timber during first controlled burn in this area. Intense heat generated by flames, together with perfect weather, made the destruction of the noxious timber a success. The first area was on Eagle creek, up Neal canyon, north of Ketchum and near highway 83. Accomplished Thursday, with mopping up operations Friday, the method in other forests has proved cheaper than destruction of the trees by use of machines. Ground crew members, carrying individual flame throwers, started first blaze at top of the mountain to cause draft much like that in wood-burning stove. Jack Lavin, Sawtooth forest official, is at the right while ahead of him, back to camera, is Maurine Fickes, who was coordinator for the operation. He was in constant touch with observer both on the ground and in the air, by short wave walkie-talkie radio. Complete and rapid coordination of the entire project was possible because of this arrangement. (Times-News photo)

Controlled Forest Blaze Destroys Diseased Timber

By O. A. GUSI KELLER
Times-News Feature Editor
KETCHUM, Aug. 3.—Diseased and worthless Douglas fir trees, plagued with dwarf mistletoe and threatening adjacent areas, went up in smoke and flame north of here as Sawtooth forest crews applied the torch in the first controlled burn in the history of the region.

Torches of Thursday morning up Neal canyon on Eagle creek, the roaring flames were helped along by means of mobile and portable flame throwers. A brief, unexpected flurry of activity came when sparks from the torches struck a nearby brush-covered hillside and set numerous spot fires which soon joined to blanket some 70 acres. An emergency call to Twin Falls resulted in two aerial tankers dumping two loads of kerosene on one corner of this fire. The planes were in the area and en route north in less than 10 minutes after the emergency call was received.

Emergency crews from Hailey and from the Sawtooth valley ranger station were also called and the blaze was soon burned out. Except for the delay caused in battling the unwanted fire for about two hours, little damage resulted, according to Maurine Fickes, Twin Falls, Sawtooth timber and fire control staff head who was coordinator for the day's operation.

The man-made fire, which officials say is the cheapest way to clear an area of diseased timber on steep mountain slopes, was under the supervision of Richard Eisebier, Ketchum district ranger, who was fire boss. J. L. Sey, Twin Falls, forest supervisor, was an observer. Elaborate plans to control the

Local Girl Wins Canada Horse Show Championship

From a trot around the arena at Frontier field in Twin Falls to the winners circle at the sixth Annual Canadian Arabian National Horse show at Calgary is a long way to come in six years.

But Susan Peters, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Peters, Twin Falls, made it.

Susan returned to Twin Falls Monday evening with the Canadian National trophy tucked under her arm. She had compelled against some of the best riders in two nations, riders backed by a swell reputation and a large stable supporting them and came out on top.

Actually, winning trophies in horse shows is nothing new for the girl from Twin Falls. She has been gathering a large collection for many years. Other than help from her immediate family and a few close friends she's done it alone—the hard way.

"The hard way means spending eight to 10 hours a day in the saddle, working a horse; getting the animal to respond with the slightest touch of the knee or shift in weight. In short it is the welding of the horse and the rider into one smooth-flowing unit, so each would look unnatural without the other. Not every day is a 10-hour day in the saddle, but a great many of them are.

According to Mrs. Peters, Susan always has liked horses and prying here away from a horse as a youngster was almost impossible. When people like Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Turner, well-known Jerome Arabian horse breeders, the task of sponsoring girl from horse is impossible.

But it is paying off. Mrs. Peters, in recalling the past few years, claims it is a real rewarding experience.

"A horse seems to be the best bridge between dolls and boys for a young girl," said the mother. On Susan's trophy shelf are victories at the Pacific Coast show in 1961; Equitation Exposition in 1962; Equitation Exposition in 1963 and 1964; and the Utah Arabian show in 1965 and 1967.

In addition to these trophies she has won or placed at shows in Oregon; has won every year she entered at the Eastern Idaho State fair, and many other shows too numerous to list. Her victory at the Canadian trophy is her victory in horse show, Utah, and California qualifies her for participation in international competition such as the Dallas show or the Madison square garden show.

"Susan competes in 'flat' and dressage, but her championship at Calgary was in the three-day class. In this event she competed on her horse 'Fadlan' against top riders using mares, stallions and geldings. Next year she will be too old to compete in junior classes.

Susan pointed out that in Canada the top ribbon is a red ribbon.

"It seemed strange to get a red ribbon for first place," she said. Another oddity is that the Canadian 'mule leaf' is placed on all trophies.

Susan began riding as a youngster in shows around Twin Falls. The first show she entered was at Frontier field and she treasures her pink participation ribbon from that event as much as any in her collection. At first she rode a pony, then she graduated to a half Arabian. The half Arabian was wild when purchased and Susan had to break and train it. The animal

Life in MAGIC VALLEY

Celebrations nowadays aren't like the ones that we used to have when we were kids," notes Earl Oakes, 74, for instance the rodeo or "brocco bustin'" on the 24th of July. No chutes were available in the early 1900s so when a horse was thrown from the arena, the rider was thrown off a backmarker. The rider threw a saddle on at least three or four times before he was able to mount and then things really popped.

Time money was available then as it is now.

The notes that the day began with a sunrise salute usually with the traditional firing of guns but on Pioneer day in 1963, the salute started off with a "bang."

The late P. O. Peterson finally convinced celebration officials that "three or four sticks of dynamite wouldn't hurt anything if they were fired in the center of Main street. He carefully went about his work of preparing for the explosion and the morning of the 24th with an extra large hole was blown in the road and several windows in the various business houses on both sides of the road were knocked completely out.

Needless to say he didn't have a chance of firing any more dynamite the next celebration. Another thing, Charles Petzell was the serenading of the first band in the Oakley area. A small group of men sailed together under the direction of the late James Port, who with about 20 other men rode on a wagon and played various types of music all through town and as far north as the end of the island.

"They always started their music by playing 'Marching Through Georgia,'" he adds.

"Some form of entertainment was going on all day with horse racing being run from the present site of the Whitley mill to Clark's for many years. Also was the traditional 'back' race between the late Charles Larson and P. O. Peterson. Zachman would climb into a gunny sack and hop, run or any other form of moving to get to the finish line which was between 50 and 100 feet away.

Easter Seal Clinic Sends Youngsters To Special Hayden Lake Summer Camp

Summer-time is camping time and youngsters at the Twin Falls Easter Seal clinic are no exception. They are going to camp.

Each summer a great many children from clinics throughout Idaho and Washington attend a special summer camp on the shores of Hayden Lake, near Coeur d'Alene. While attending the camp, the children are under the supervision of trained instructors.

According to Mrs. Merle Stoddard, clinic director, the ratio is one aide for every four students. The camp is designed to help crippled children, but the camp also has a non-crippled child for every four who are crippled. The belief is this makes camp seem more like a camp.

The entire agenda of the camp is geared to bring the youngsters into the world of the outdoors. For instance, each child participates in an overnight hike—often in a canoe. The camp also has a special program for the children's fishing.

More than anything else it gives the children an opportunity to see the great outdoors and enjoy the camp in a healthy way.

"The camp does wonders for the children," said Stoddard.

Stamp Window

The navy is offering collectors an opportunity to have covers postmarked in Antarctica and by ships participating in Operation Deep Freeze during the 1963-64 season.

One cover per person will be accepted for cancellation at Byrd station and South Pole station. Addressed envelopes bearing 6 cent U. S. stamps should be sent before Sept. 1 to: Deep Freeze Philatelic Mail, Naval Construction Battalion Center, Davisville, East Greenwich, R. I.

Only one cover is sent, the postmark desired should be indicated lightly in pencil on the lower left-hand corner. The covers probably will be returned between October, 1964, and April, 1965, although some may be sent back earlier.

Collectors of ship cancellations will send up to three stamped-addressed covers to each or any of these ships, addressed to Deep Freeze Philatelic Mail, by the date shown:

USS Blissem (DEB-400), FPO, New York, N. Y., Aug. 15.
USS "Albatross" (AGOS-3), FPO, New York, N. Y., Oct. 1.

TWIN FALLS BUHL JEROME

Passage of Fish Planned At Selway

By JIM HUNTER
The Idaho Game Department announced last week that passage of fish through the Selway fish passage is planned for the fall. The passage is to be built to help salmon and steelhead through the rough waters which have been a barrier for them to ascend. Behind this brief item is the story of the largest single construction project ever undertaken by the Idaho Game and Fish Department. The project was entered by the Boyles Brothers Drilling Company, Salt Lake City. The $215,000 contract was awarded entirely with Columbia river fisheries development program funds which are appropriated by congress.

Selway falls is about 21 miles upstream from the river's mouth. The falls consists of two tiers over which the water drops about 22 feet at low water in a 100-foot stretch. At high water the drop increases to about 32 feet because of the unusual shape of the overall channel through the falls area.

Adults from both spring-run salmon, which normally spawn in May and June and fall-run salmon, which spawn in September and October, will be able to use the Selway falls fishway at low-water stage of the river. This, of course, will open many miles of new spawning area for the sea-going salmon as well as facilitate the upstream migration of steelhead.

A radical departure from the usual conservation devices for the convenience of migrating fish, which generally are around man-made obstacles. However, a smaller fish 150,000 was constructed at Dagger falls on the middle fork of the Salmon river.

Build in 1900, this structure provides easy passage for anadromous fish around the falls. Concentrations of late-running salmon during low-water stages no longer are observed below the falls.

The main fishway will be a tunnel around the falls. It will be 22 feet high, 22 feet wide and about 500 feet long. Barriers designed to "bite" the water-level will be built every 24 feet throughout the tunnel. The fishway, called by engineers an "offset-type," is designed to operate through all stages of the Selway river flow.

Water flows over the falls very tremendously throughout the year, according to daily volume readings taken a few miles below the falls. The minimum flow of record was 100 cubic feet per second on Jan. 1, 1937. One day the maximum of 48,000 cubic feet per second recorded on May 29, 1948—a difference of 48,000 cubic feet per second.

Fish passage at the falls is virtually blocked by extremely low flows up to about 3,000 cubic feet per second. Flows of between 3,400 and 12,000 cubic feet per second at some stages of the water level also form a velocity block which migratory fish are unable to surmount. This results from the water being channeled at great speeds between huge boulders which dot the river bed through the falls. With fish passage assured all

PLENTY OF WATER for fish passage on Selway falls during spring runoff, the water flow dwindles from as much as 48,000 cubic feet per second to a minimum flow of 100 feet per second, a difference of 48,000 cubic feet per second. Migratory fish cannot ascend the falls during the extremely low flow periods up to 3,000 cubic feet per second—and the waterfalls form a natural block to fish passage. The fish and game department now is building a tunnel fishway around the obstacle to open miles of new upstream spawning area for salmon and steelhead. This $215,000 construction contract will be met entirely with funds appropriated by congress. (Fish and game photo) various flows, the real problem is one of timing. Since spring runoff is not a stable thing from one year to the next, the periods of fish possible water flows over the falls do not always coincide with the fish runs. When this occurs the migrants are detained and often are unable to continue upstream until the time when they should be preparing to spawn far up in the headwaters of a tributary stream. Thus a bad year could have a pronounced effect on the continuity of a fish run, since they would be unable to complete the cycle four years later. Because of its location, Selway falls is one of the main keys to the success of the department's eight-year program, now in its third year, for restoring salmon and steelhead runs in the Clearwater river drainage. Two other major projects designed to facilitate salmon and steelhead migration in the Clearwater are the improvement of the Lewiston dam, and the abandonment and removal of the Grangeville dam and hydroelectric plant on the South fork of the Clearwater river.

The latter dam was blown out by the Washington Water Power company Aug. 3 and the re-amping of one of three fish ladders at the Lewiston dam will be completed this year. The Washington Water Power company is drawing the plans for the construction work on this ladder will be financed by the Columbia river fisheries development program.

Director John R. Woodworth said that the federal and state agencies are looking at remaining waters to restore spawning runs for salmon and steelhead because large portions of the Columbia river spawning areas have been lost since the 1940's.

College Educator, Former Resident of Burley, Heads Pakistan School Plan

Establishment of an agricultural college in the United States is now underway at Layall, Pakistan, where Dr. Alfred O. Shaw, Burley high school alumnus, is in charge of the operating party.

Behind the "unique" body of educators is Dr. Alfred O. Shaw, who was graduated from Burley high school in 1925. He is now in Layall, Pakistan, where he is in charge of the operating party.

Shaw's wife, the former Thelma Orlin, formerly of Elba and Burley, participated in a study reunion.

The reunion was attended by the nine sons and daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Orlin. The wife was unique, in that all the children are over 40 years old and the family has remained intact, with no deaths in the group.

The gathering was at the Twin Falls home of Mrs. William (Orrin) Hall, one of the daughters of the late Orlins. Other sons and daughters of the late Orlins who were present were Mrs. Leslie Krause, Portland, Ore.; Mrs. Olive Krause, Portland, Ore.; Mrs. Halley, Fred Orlin, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Mrs. Orlin, Orlin, and Lewis and Orlin, Orlin, Orlin.

All were born and raised in Twin Falls, together with his professors in the program, five held degrees from the University of Idaho. Their families accompanied them to the foreign nation where the university is being established.

Concerning the school, Dr. Shaw said some of the buildings which can be used were available and that the program was started. However, most of the structures will have to be built from scratch.

The climate is extremely hot (for instance, the land produces two full crops a year—spring and fall). However, the land is available for the school, because power is lacking in sufficient quantity.

The educator points out that one of the first persons he visits when coming back to the United States is a dentist.

"There are American trained dentists in the country but they have very little equipment," he pointed out. He also said that the same was true of eye doctors and that for this reason "any family glasses are secured in the states."

Dr. Shaw originally went to Pakistan in 1954 and remained through 1956. He led the initial inter-college exchange program in which 21 American families went to that nation for advanced and cultural study and a similar group came from Pakistan to the United States for advance study.

By way of Honolulu, Tokyo, Hong Kong and Calcutta, Dr. Shaw and his family will fly back to Pakistan. He is scheduled to arrive there by Sept. 1 to resume the educational program.

MAGIC VALLEY PORTRAIT Kimberly School Head Sees Sports as Important Part of Educational Setup

Competitive sports are a very important part of the educational program of any school. That is the studied opinion of Robert W. (Dutch) Sherman, now superintendent of schools at Kimberly and a man who has been engaged in sports either as a participant, a coach or official, since about the time he took his first steps.

There is another situation which calls for Dutch from the shoulder, statements from this young superintendent who was born and educated in this state.

"Like a lot of educators, I feel that money isn't everything in this life. If all teachers felt that way, then all of them would be trying to go to California and from there love this state, the opportunities offered, the parents and students of the community in which they teach."

"I'm one of the educators who is here because I want to be here and because this is where I want to live," Sherman said emphatically.

As an aside, he named one friend, a teacher two years ago in another system who was engaged in sports—either as a participant, a coach or official, and taught in California last year. This man, he said, will be back in an Idaho school this fall. He told Sherman that one year out of Idaho was enough.

Sherman was born in Boise and received his starting education in public schools there, going through the eighth, sophomore year before he took his junior and senior year at Vale, Ore.

Coming out of grade school, he entered competitive sports early, with the result he received his first varsity letter in track and football. Tipping the scales at only 100 pounds, he excelled in throwing the javelin. He has also got junior varsity letters in basketball and football.

At Vale he went back into sports for two years in a row. He was guard of the basketball team, quarterback of the football squad, catcher on the baseball team and javelin thrower at track.

After his graduation from high school he called the Magic Valley of Idaho, where he attended for one and one-half years before transferring to the College of Idaho, southern branch, now Idaho State university.

At the College of Idaho, while engaged in the study of education, he found time to letter in basketball, football and football in his freshman year. At the Pocatello school, as a sophomore, he lettered in football before being called to the service.

His life in the service was interesting and active, he recalls. After entering the air force he was sent to the Mediterranean theater of operations where he started as a turret-gunner on a B-24 and ended up as an enlisted bombardier.

The active part of his service ended when he was discharged, completed 105 missions over enemy territory during the time he was in the service. Some were over France, but most over Italy. On 63 of the 103 flights he was enemy planes and bombs were dropped.

Most of the bombing flights at that time were made from an altitude of 16,000 feet—no above the range of enemy anti-aircraft fire, he recalls that on his initial flight he saw those grey puffins near the ground and across the Alps the staff were. When told they were burning shells he admitted he was more impressed with a job to perform and they do them well. They win championships.

Toward the end of the war

ROBERT W. (DUTCH) SHERMAN

Sherman saw his first job plans, and football coach for four years he gave it up to concentrate on the job of principal which he held for six years more. At that time he was elevated to system superintendent and has remained in that post ever since.

During the time he has been at Kimberly he completed necessary study in summer schools at the University of Idaho and earned a master's degree.

After officiating in football and basketball games for several years, Sherman laid out his last season and watched from the stands.

"I just cannot sit still so next season I'll go back into officiating once more and, in addition to high school level, hope to officiate at some college games," he said.

Basketball officiating is hardest, he declares, because decisions must be made "right now." Physical action also is greater in a basketball contest.

Did he ever make a mistake in a ruling? He admits he has, but not intentionally.

He likes the post of superintendent because all students are results in only one student being held from making mistakes. "The work of the whole year seems well worth the effort," he says.

Sherman owns his own home in Kimberly where he resides with his wife and one son, Rick J., 8 years old. A student at the grade school, the boy shows a decided interest in athletics, his father admits.

Along with the opportunity to live in Idaho, Sherman takes full advantage of fishing and hunting opportunities.

was her full responsibility. She feeds it and exercises it. When it was sick she helped it. When she began winning on the horse, her father consented to buy Padlin. However, the responsibility still rests with Susan. When the weather is 12 below zero, she still has to take care of her horse.

Susan hopes to use money from Padlin's foals to put her through college. So owning a horse isn't expensive as it might seem, she claims.

While much of the work has been entirely Susan's, her parents assisted her. Her father serves as her groom during the shows. At the big shows, many riders have a wife or mother to groom and equipment. When the Peters family goes each member of the family has a separate job to perform and they do them well. They win championships.

Feddytorial On The Heels of Santa Claus The Bills Come In

(and by the time they do, most of the toys are broken)

It makes you feel so good to lend (give) billions to build and equip factories for poor nations (they'll soon compete with you and take your job, but it's kindly).

And it's so pleasant to "give" some community a power project. ("It's Federal money; it's 'free'").

And if the "little people" of the world threaten a red tantrum if they don't get all they want, give them more. "We want to buy friends, and after all, it's all Federal money."

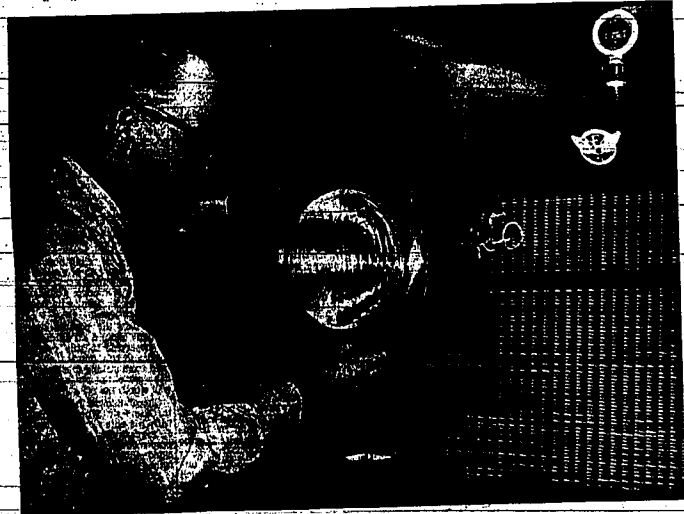

But then the bills come in. We learn what we should have remembered, all along — there is no such thing as Federal money — it's all local money, your money. So taxes go up and prices go up; our pensions don't buy as much; our savings don't go as far. That's a pretty big price to pay, for being a "good fellow," isn't it?

Before we accept a "present" from kindly Uncle Sam — before we give away "his" money, look at the price tag. It may be concealed, but you can be very sure IT'S THERE. It's YOUR MONEY.

India Arms To Counter Red Action

NEW DELHI, India, Aug. 3 (AP) — The government is genuine worried about the possibility of Chinese communist attacks in the Himalayas this summer, perhaps at any moment.

But India's principal arms and bookers, the United States and Britain, are not about to ring alarm bells. They agree that there are heavy Chinese troop concentrations in the border areas. But they differ over whether fighting is likely to break out again this year.

Officials of the two Western powers are reliably said to have accepted India reports of a Chinese buildup, particularly in the northeast. But they differ over whether it is to be interpreted this way.

Indian officials report a continuous forward movement of Chinese soldiers and supplies in recent weeks. They say this may mean probing attacks by communists this month.

Such attacks, they believe, would aim at pushing the Indian army off-balance, humiliating Prime Minister Nehru's government and showing off Chinese muscle.

Western experts say this is possible, but they favor another

BIRDSEYE VIEW of controlled burning operations by forest service crews up Neal canyon and on Eagle creek north of Ketchum, is noted in this picture taken from a helicopter. The disease-infested timber which was burned was located to the left of the well-defined line running down the mountain ridge. The timber to the right of this line was not burned. Timber area totaled 120 acres and to this was added some 70 acres of brush which went up in flames when sparks ignited spot fires on an adjoining hillside. The hillside is smoke-covered at the left. Base camp is seen at bottom, right of the picture. (Times-News photo)

Controlled Forest Fire Successful in Destroying Stand of Diseased Timber

U. N. to Ban Weapons for South Africa

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Aug. 3.—The United Nations announced Friday it is banning by the end of 1963 the sale of all weapons and military equipment to South Africa because of that country's racial segregation policies.

The embargo was disclosed by U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson in a speech before the security council.

He spoke after Ghana's Alex Quaison-Sackey had denounced South Africa because of that country's racial segregation policies.

Stevenson told the council the U.S. already had banned the sale of military equipment that might be used by South Africa to enforce its racial apartheid policies and is now ready to make such a ban complete.

He said the ban could not become fully effective before the end of the year because of existing commitments, including the sale of air to air missiles and torpedoes for submarines.

A cleared area ran the entire length of the mountain ridge separating the diseased area from a healthy stand on the opposite side. Pressure pumps were strategically located along creek banks and a team of observers took up posts on an adjoining mountain where, through use of high power glasses, they could observe each step in the destruction.

Fires were first started by individual forest workers on the top of the mountain. This official explained, set up a desired understory which pulled air up the canyon floor. As a result, when the top was burning over the entire area, the situation developed much the same as it does in a coal burning stove where the road added to the heat and updraft, with a result the area was soon one great flame. Action of this type, accompanied by individual workers with portable flame throwers, continued until a lower road and soon the entire side of the mountain was going up in flames.

It was at this time that the spot fires broke out in the brush on the adjoining mountain causing additional emergency measures to be ordered. This fire, however, burned itself out when it reached the top.

A helicopter was at the scene all day and was used for aerial observations and during the brief second fire, to transport shovels and other equipment to the mountain top for use of ascending crews.

Friday afternoon, in Twin Falls, Sevy announced that the burn was an "outstanding success" and that "everything was under control and proceeding according to plan" in the burned area. Although this method of destroying diseased trees has been followed in north Idaho, and in some other forest area states, it was the first time it was used in the Sawtooth forest and in region four, with headquarters at Ogden, Utah.

Pickett pointed out that there were three purposes behind the controlled fire. First was to aid control of the dwarf mistletoe; second was to eradicate the worthless host trees and third was to convert the area to a planting program. This fall, he said, some 15 acres will be seeded while next spring the balance will be planted to seedlings. All will be Douglas fir.

Weather conditions for the project were termed "perfect" by Ranger Stauber. Date was set about two weeks ago and, despite wide variability, rain, numerous calls were received by government departments over the valley that a forest fire had been spotted. Many motorists, passing on highway 20, attempted to enter the area but gate guards turned them aside for their own safety.

Total acres of trees destroyed was given at 120 while an estimated 70 acres of brush went up in smoke during the unscheduled blaze.

All communication between various crews and observers was by walkie-talkie radio both on the ground and in the air.

The area was divided into three sectors for the activities. Sector one was under the direction of A. Ashton, assistant ranger in Oakley; sector two was headed by Ranger Omaha, district ranger at Stanley; and sector three by Ned Millard, district ranger at Twin Falls.

Observers practically filled the area. They came from Ogden, McCall, Twin Falls, Hatley, Fairfield, Festerville, Malta; Burley and other locations. Various forest experts, including fire research experts from Montana, also looked on.

No wildlife was harmed during the operation, it was explained, because any in the area was driven out by pre-fire activities over a period of about two weeks. Dr. W. R. Beaufort, fire researcher, set up three plots previous to the fire and these will be observed for the next three years to gain valuable information as to the result of a fire in a forest area. He is from Montana, Mont., as was Dr. Jack Lyons, biologist.

Pickett pointed out that experience has shown that wildlife

Top England Residence Is Remodeled

LONDON, Aug. 3.—For the past three years workmen have been clambering over every inch of No. 10 Downing Street—the elegant town house where a nation's history is enshrined behind an unpretentious Georgian facade.

The building has been shored up with scaffolding, great structural improvements have been made, and the noise of hammering and pneumatic drilling has penetrated to quiet corners of the Foreign Office across the way.

At this stage of the work, the outside of No. 10 is barely recognizable. The famous front door swings idly open. It needs painting and the floor is to be grouted and the glass fanlight. Carpenters are apt to lounge there having a smoke.

A new elevator has replaced the temperamental antique which led to the state apartments on the second floor and constantly broke down. A large number of additional bedrooms and bathrooms have been provided—either by converting existing accommodation or extending the building on either wing.

Yet when the project is completed in August, the building will not be greatly changed externally. For with history embedded in every stone, great care has been taken to preserve its traditional appearance. The same rule of thumb has been followed inside where the original features of all important rooms—such as paneling, cornices and stone floor coverings—have been restored.

Like an iceberg, No. 10 exposes only a small part of its mass to public view. It is in fact two houses, one built by the Harvard-educated Sir George Downing toward the end of the 17th century and the other a mansion of slightly more elderly vintage at the rear. Downing, whose parents joined the Puritan exodus to America, was a nephew of John Winthrop, the first governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony. He returned to England as a Puritan preacher in 1644, became Cromwell's chief of intelligence and the royalist wars and later a senator at the Hague. Downing built a second house of which No. 10 is a remnant.
